

M4 - Reflective Essay

- 1. How do you view and appreciate your physical self, and what personal commitments can you make to care for and respect your body?

I view my physical self as something I need to care for and respect. However, most times I take for granted what my physical body allows me to do, ignoring the fact that I wouldn't even be able to do the things I enjoy without being blessed with a healthy body. I must commit myself to healthier routines like eating balanced meals and resting when needed, to give my own body the appreciation it deserves.

- 2. How do you understand your sexuality, sexual orientation, and gender identity, and how do these aspects shape your sense of self?

In my personal life, I have friends that make jokes about doing certain things that are considered more feminine or looking a certain way makes you gay. I understand my sexuality and gender identity and I believe that I am above letting anybody else but me define who I am. I stand with the belief that being able to act freely regardless of what others think is a sign of true confidence in one's own identity.

- 3. What are your thoughts and personal stands on the issues of body shaming, gender-based violence, and discrimination? How do these issues affect individuals and society as a whole?

I believe body shaming, gender-based violence, and discrimination are serious issues that harm individuals' confidence and safety. They also weaken society by creating division and injustice. I stand against these practices because everyone deserves respect and dignity.

- 4. In what ways can you promote respect for gender equality and human dignity in your personal life, community, or future profession?

I can promote respect by treating others equally regardless of gender. And hopefully in my future profession, I can aim to create an environment where everyone feels valued regardless of gender.
